Each petticoat was made of coarse sacking, and was girt with innumerable pockets, all of them lined with soft material so as to keep the bottles from clinking and possibly breaking each other. Unhappily for poor Mary MacMahon the petticoats, whiskey and porter were confiscated by the relentless police magistrat, and the chief delinquent was sent to fail for three months. I entertain no doubt that the hearty sym-

in the Use of Words.

Anything out of the common in nomenclature runs the risk of being burlesqued by unskiled tongues, say the Boston Gazette. The nurse who called her charges "Miss Burlal and "Miss Jones" must have made their mother wish she had never christened them Beryl and Joan. As Betsy and Jane they would have come out all right.

Horse, too, with fine names get strangely miscalled in the stable. One pair, known by their master as Rustum and Sobrah, degenerated first into "Rusty and Sorchaek," and fell ultimately into the commonplace as "the little horse and the decthor."
